“ Remembering Rick as hilariously witty and easy-going...He was always there for his family. When his brother suffered a bad ankle injury, Rick and Bev came in the middle of the night and took him to the ER. He was the first one to rush to his mom's house when she needed support. He was always the first one there...he put his parents and siblings before work, before sleep, before everything. That is how I'll remember him. Now he's with Keko and Uncle Bill among others. The pain of separation is only temporary. We'll all see him again.
