“ Momma, I'm so glad that you are no longer in pain. You can finally breathe now with no help needed. My heart is crushed once again from the loss of a loved one but I know one day I'll see you again and the others who have gone before me. You are truly loved and cherished. You are missed dearly. I thank God for letting us have you in our lives as long as He did even though looking back it feels like you were only here briefly. Time goes by fast sometimes and we always think we will have more time to do things and to say things but the passing of you and dad has shown me that you can be here today and gone tomorrow. I'm hurt that you are gone but I wouldn't wish you back here to life because I know where you are is so much better. I just wasn't done loving you yet. I wasn't done showing you how loved you were here. I'm sorry for wasting time on other things when I should have been enjoying your presence while you were here. I can see so many times that I could've been spending time with you but instead I was to busy doing other things that didn't really matter. I love you momma, and I will miss you for the rest of my life.
